

Relatively Relative

Consider some object with a rest mass of m_0 . By way of magic, this object is placed in a vacuum of infinite size and stands completely still. You, magically, apply a force F on the object. What is the speed of the object as a function of time t if F is constant? What if F is proportional to the mass, say $F = mg$ with g as a constant?