Lifelong Connections, Life-changing Opportunities

Student Organizations
> Explore Your Interests, Meet New People
Getting involved beyond the classroom is the key to maximizing your Stevens experience with a healthy balance of work and play. Explore new topics, further develop your interests, foster new friendships and share experiences with people whose interests match your own. Choose from more than 100 undergraduate student organizations with diverse offerings that include arts and music, media, honor societies, recreation, faith and religion, and so much more.
Active participation in student organizations and campus events not only helps provide a well-rounded student experience, it can also help jumpstart your career after graduation. Extracurricular activities offer the chance to meet new people, network with professionals in your aspiring career field and gain resume building experience. You’ll also develop team building and leadership skills — two strengths that will help you in and out of the classroom.

Fraternity and Sorority Life
> Get Connected
Membership in a fraternity or sorority offers a unique college experience. At Stevens, Fraternity and Sorority Life offers much more than an opportunity for socialization. With a membership of roughly 36% of the total undergraduate population, our fraternities and sororities focus on academics, personal development, leadership skills and civic engagement in ways that benefit members in life and in their career.

The Office of Undergraduate Student Life is committed to extending assistance and resources to Greek organizations through programs, resources and advisement. Along with our 20 individual organizations, the office works in collaboration with the three governing councils: Interfraternity Council (IFC), Stevens Panhellenic Council (SPC) and the Multicultural Greek Council (MGC). In addition, the Greek community is home to Order of Omega, the national Greek honor society, and the Stevens United Greek Committee.

Leadership and Civic Engagement
> Get Comfortable in the Driver’s Seat
Stevens alumni regularly cite their ability to lead and collaborate among the top skills honed at Stevens. By taking advantage of leadership opportunities at Stevens, you will gain increased levels of confidence, the ability to think on your feet, and learn how to effectively bring individuals and groups together. Opportunities include our Stevens LEADS program which offers seminars for Emerging, Advancing, and Transforming leaders annually. These seminars provide lectures and workshops to help students build upon their leadership experience and learn how to better leverage their knowledge and skills to have a positive impact on the Stevens community and beyond.

In addition, we are committed to preparing you to be active global citizens by engaging you in meaningful service activities that enhance the quality of life for the local, national, and international communities. Get involved in one of our service organizations or take part in annual service programs such as our Global Service Initiative to Jamaica.

Diversity
> Valuing Differences, Sharing Perspectives
Stevens sees value in difference, understanding that the academic culture of the institution is enriched by an exchange of ideas from people with diverse backgrounds in the broadest sense. This includes a wide range of ethnic, racial, regional, cultural, economic and religious backgrounds, first-generation students, persons with disabilities, people of different sexual orientations, ages, political perspectives and many others. The university places high value on the ideas, contributions and participation of every student, faculty member, staff and alumnus/a.
Throughout the year, our office supports and celebrates the rich history and heritage of the Stevens community members through monthly diversity and inclusion programming, heritage month celebrations and programs for women, to name a few. Housed under our Safe Zone Ally Program, we also provide LGBTQ+ awareness training for faculty, staff and students, as well as resources and support for our students.
